

Find out Interior Designer Brad Odom's Favorite Atlanta Picks

Check out his 8 favorite spots in the city.

Brad Odom, former Director of Design Education at West Elm, a division of Williams-Sonoma, Inc., has been creating a buzz in interior design ever since he opened his store Dixon Rye in Atlanta's West Midtown in the fall of 2016. You could say his sensibilities have been largely shaped by his Southern roots (born in Mississippi) and having spent considerable time in New Orleans and Birmingham.

Bread & Butterfly

Bread & Butterfly

This cafe and bistro in the heart of Atlanta's bucolic Inman Park neighborhood has recently developed a cult following, especially for breakfast outings. Odom recommends "the soft scrambled eggs with cold smoked trout" but he also praises Bread & Butterfly's design aesthetic. "The atmosphere is so well done. Square Feet Studio designed it. It's perfect. It feels quaint, it feels local. It's like being transported to a whole other European experience."